MONDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 21, 1878.

Too Hor for HIM .- As Confederate war reminiscences are always in order, here is one too good to lie buried. The hero of the joke was one Jim. He was attached to Rosser's Cavalry, in Stuart's command. Jim was noted for his strong antipathy to shot and shell, and a peculiar way be had of avoiding too closs a communion with the same, but at last all bie plans failed to keep him out of the "row," and he, with his companions, under a licutenant, was detailed to support a battery that composed a portion of the rear guard. The enemy kept pressing so close, in fact, as to endanger the retreating forces, and the troops covering the retreat had orders to keep the enemy in check for a given period at all hazards, and the order was obeyed to the letter under a galling fire. Jim grew desperate. He stuck behind trees that appeared to his expited vision no larger than ram rods. He then tried to lie dowo. In fact he placed himself in every position that his genius cou'd invent, but the "hiss" of the builet baunted him still. At last, in despair, he called to the commanding officer: "Lieutenant, let's fall back !" "I cannot do it, Jim !" replied the efficer. "Well, I'll be dratted if we don't get eleaned cut if we stay here!" "My orders, Jim, are to hold this place and support that battery of guts," pointing to the artillery close by. "It we fall back, the enemy will tush in and capture the Just at that ics:ant a well dir. cted, bullet impressed Jim with the fact that a change of base became necessary. Jim found another apparently protected spot, and, as soon as he recovered his miod, he sang cu: "Ob, Lieutenaor! what do you think them 'ere can-nons cost?' "I don't know, Jim; I sappose $1.000." "Well," said Jim, "let's take up a collection and pay for the darned gues, and let the Yackees have 'em.
